BRENDA ZLAMANY: Twelve richly glazed paintings of male portrait-gallery heads are nicely interspersed with 12 smaller paintings of small, dead birds, all glowing from dark backgrounds reminiscent of traditional hunting scenes. Predators and prey? Before you jump to conclusions, take another look: you might recognize some of them. Except for one, they're in the artworld, including Christian Leigh, Glenn Ligon, Leonardo Drew, Leon Golub, Chuck Close (who seems to be in everyone's work lately), Lucio Pozzi (sans bird), and Dokoupil. Through October 15, E. M. Donahue Gallery, 560 Broadway, at Prince Street, 226-1111. (Levin)
