

Print Article

Jason Andrew of Storefront gallery in Bushwick
photo by the Greenpoint Gazette

Sissel Kardel in "Pull My Daisy," Nov. 19, 2010-Jan. 8, 2011, at Lisa Ruyter's gallery in Vienna

Brenda Zlamany, Portrait #48, (Leonardo Drew), 2000

TINY TOP TEN

by Charlie Finch

You know, any year that Lisa Phillips demonstrates at the Met, Jeff Koons gets to curate, Deitch allegedly gets a facelift, Gagolian opens a gallery in Switzerland and the dead lead keeps dominating in general has gotta suck, so time to count our blessings.

- 1) Pull My Daisy is now available on YouTube, featuring Larry Rivers as the brakeman, Alice Neel at the organ and Jack Kerouac narrating.
  - 2) Jason Andrew of Storefront in Bushwick is the new male pinup.
  - 3) Sissel Kardel, the last pre-Raphaelite painter, showed at Lisa Ruyter's gallery in Vienna.
  - 4) We got to see how Brenda Zlamany painted Leonardo Drew nude.
  - 5) Bharti Kher's elephant broke a million big ones at auction.
  - 6) Lena Dunham's movie is a hit, even though it is basically mumblecore squared.
  - 7) Lots of people crowded the Anselm Kiefer show, even though it was terrible.
  - 8) No new images of Barack Obama were created in 2010.
  - 9) Daniel Loeb got appointed to the MOCA board in L.A., thus spelling doom for Eli Broad.
  - 10) Rafael Ferrer got signed by Adam Baumgold!
- Happy 2011.

CHARLIE FINCH is co-author of Most Art Sucks: Five Years of Coagula (Smart Art Press).